IN MEMORIAM

In February of our sophomore year, Crystal Laganas died after a long and brave struggle against illness. She was truly remarkable during this very difficult time. Alba Kuilan, a member of the class of '93, wrote the following poem for The Review as a tribute to her friend and classmate.

FOREVER FIFTEEN

Although you were only fifteen and you left so soon. You have won the hearts of many people, mine too.

Your death was more than saying goodbye, crying or feeling hurt. My dear friends, you have opened my eyes and now I know what life is truly worth.

I'll never forget you, my dear friend.
You died at such a young age,
And even though I may grow old,
In my heart you will remain Forever Fifteen.

Headmaster William Samaras

Dear Graduates:

As you prepare to leave Lowell High School, you will find that you will be living in a different world than we, your teachers and parents. That different world will demand that you be prepared to adjust to change. To meet the challenge of change, you will need among other things, to continue your quest for knowledge. You have made an excellent start by completing your high school education, but you must not stop here. You must become lifelong learners in order that you might be able to take advantage of any opportunity afforded to you. I wish you good health and success.
